Hello Aspiring Author,

Everyday new stories are being published and what about yours? You may feel that you are called to write a book and you have no idea how to get started. You may have done some journaling, wondered who would publish it and daydreamed about sharing your message with the world. You may be riding the rollercoaster of starting and stopping the process or wrestling with doubts. You may have even shared with others that you want to write a book only to see years pass without having produced a finished product. I get it! It took me four years to write my first book. I started and stopped several times. Although I had plenty of writing experience, I struggled with how to carefully tell my story in such a way that retained the message while also honoring those who were part of my story. I knew there had to be a better way.

I took my experience and background as a teacher and went to the drawing board. I developed a plan for how to write my book in a timely manner, retain the power of my message and directly impact my intended reader. I applied this framework and finished in twelve weeks. You read that correctly, twelve weeks! I have been able to apply this same framework to help countless authors write their books. These aspiring authors are shocked to see how much they've actually been able to produce in such a short period of time. One author marvels as he was able to write 10k words in one week.

You don't have to be a professional writer or even a good writer to get your story out there. My THINK-SPEAK-CREATE method is a combination of my own experience, professional background in English literature, writing, education and more than ten years of editing experience. I put together this framework so you don't have to put your book writing dreams on pause any longer. It's time to move your story from your heart into people's hands.

Let's get started today! You have a legacy to leave behind. You have a painful experience that is going to be turned into a purposeful book. I would be honored to get you started and make your dreams of writing a book a reality.

With Love and Appreciation,

Daniella Ordonez
